Dear Friends and Members,

Are you making New Year’s resolutions? Or are you looking back on 2014 and reflecting on the year’s events? I’m doing both, and I’d like to invite you to reminisce and resolve with me.

Reminiscences: The year 2014 was a memorable one for G&S Austin.

- Our February production of Trial by Jury surpassed expectations, filling two houses. We are acting on the discovery that our audiences want a second staged performance each year.
- The summer grand production of H.M.S. Pinafore brought large audiences to see a spectacular show … and once again we garnered some coveted B. Iden Payne nominations.
- Downton Abbey Sings G&S and Return to Fairyland musicales, devised and directed by Janette Jones, were two of the most enjoyable Sunday afternoons of the year.

It was a lovely year for G&S Austin, and the coming year should be splendid, as well. That leads to …

Resolutions: Make plans now to be a part of these 2015 events:

- Annual Business Meeting and Sing-Along (Sunday, January 11). Join us at Genesis Presbyterian Church and enjoy some informal singing of G&S choruses led by Leonard Johnson and accompanied by Jeanne Sasaki. In a brief business meeting we will elect our board of directors for 2015. Please see the following article.

- Mid-year production of The Zoo (Sunday, February 15, 2:30 and 4 pm). Join us at the lovely Worley Barton Theater for a charming piece featuring music by Sullivan but libretto by another collaborator, B. C. Stephenson under the pen name Bolton Rowe. The score for The Zoo, first produced in 1875, lay dormant until the original manuscript was purchased at an auction in 1966. Since then, it has enjoyed a revival. Like Trial by Jury, it is a one-act opera without spoken dialogue, running about 40 minutes. The story concerns two smitten gentlemen: A nobleman who goes to the zoo to woo the girl who sells snacks there, and a chemist who loves a young lady and believes that he has poisoned her by mixing up her father’s prescription with peppermint that he had meant for her. Sounds a lot like a farcical Gilbert libretto, doesn’t it? Don’t miss it!

- Musicals to bring you joy. On May 17, you’ll get a sneak peek at this summer’s The Sorcerer. In September and November, we’ll have some more wonderful confections.

- Grand production of The Sorcerer June 18-28. More on this to come … but be sure the dates are on your calendar.

Thanks for reminiscing and resolving with me!

Our Society will elect a Board of Directors for the calendar year 2015 at our Annual Meeting on Sunday, January 11, at 3 pm. Please come to this important gathering at Genesis Presbyterian (see map on p. 6). At the meeting, we will hear a report on activities of the past year and plans for the coming year, then hold elections.

Reba Gillman, Chair of the Nominating Committee, was successful in securing the agreement of the twelve current members of the Board of Directors to continue their service in 2015. These nominees are:

- Reba Gillman
- Allan Longacre
- Charles Smaistrla
- Leonard Johnson
- Michael Meigs
- David Treadwell
- David Little
- Diane Radin
- Libby Weed
- Roberta Long
- Robert L. Schneider
- Dave Wieckowski

Additional nominations will be accepted from the floor; self-nomination is permitted. (Of course, nominees must be members.) Each paid-up member is entitled to a number of votes equal to the number of Directors to be elected, but is not permitted to vote more than once for a given candidate. The candidates receiving the most votes are elected. In accordance with our by-laws, officers are elected by the Board during their first meeting after the Annual Meeting. Following the election, Leonard Johnson will lead us in singing some great G&S choruses … and provide some excellent tutelage as he does so. As always, please bring munchies to share!

A Return to Fairyland – Memories of Iolanthe
by Reba Gillman

Sunday, November 9 at 3 pm: we are happily gathering in the Worley Barton Theater at the Brentwood Christian School, to enjoy recollections of our delightful June 2009 production of Iolanthe. Janette Jones has organized this musical with her usual imagination and energy. We can expect cleverly contrived costumes, good music, and even occasional amazing hints at scenery. And of course good singers, and the wonderful Jeanne Sasaki at the piano, with Cody Ireland turning pages. All are singing the roles they sang in 2009 except Angela Irving who is replacing Meredith Ruduski as Phyllis; and two men and two women choral singers who are also new. Again we have about 140 people in the enthusiastic audience.

As the program begins we find that President Libby Weed is also serving as Mother Goose, the Narrator. Lisa Alexander plays the part of Queen of the Fairies; June Julian plays Iolanthe; Angela Irving – Phyllis; Natalie Wilemon – Celia; Patricia Combs – Leila; Derek Smootz – Strephon; Andy Fleming – Earl Tolloller; David Fontenot – Earl of Mountararat; Arthur DiBianca – The Lord Chancellor; Russell Gregory – Private Willis; Nancy Arnold, Maurine McLean, Janette Jones – Chorus of fairies; Mark Long, Robert L. Schneider, David Treadwell – Chorus of Peers. All are on stage, including Jeanne at her piano, who is frequently rendered invisible when she is plunged into darkness. The music begins as Celia, Leila, and the chorus of fairies sing “Tripping hither, tripping thither,” to tell how they live their fairy lives, and how much they miss their sister, Iolanthe, who was banished twenty-five years earlier by their Fairy Queen for marrying a mortal. By fairy law, every fairy who marries a mortal must die. But Iolanthe did not die; why did the Queen banish her? The fairies persuade the Queen to call up Iolanthe and sing “Iolanthe! From thy dark exile summoned!” joined by Iolanthe and then Celia, Leila, and the chorus of fairies. The fairies learn that Iolanthe had a son, who is half a fairy. He lives nearby and sees his mother regularly. The story continues, told by the songs the cast sing. Phyllis and Strephon sing of their love, “Good morrow, good lover” and “None shall part us in You’re sure to win – Yours will be the charming maidie: Be your law Th e ancient saw, ‘faint heart never won fair lady!’” Phyllis and Strephon straighten out their misunderstandings and sing, “If we’re weak enough to marry Ere we marry, You and I,” and ask Strephon to plead with the Lord Chancellor to allow them to marry. Iolanthe knows that if she reveals her identity, she will die in punishment. Shrouded by a veil, she sings “My lord, a suppliant at your feet I kneel, Oh, listen to a mother’s fond appeal … ‘tis for my son, young Strephon, that I plead! He loves!” The Lord Chancellor is moved by the mother’s song but says it cannot be, for Phyllis is his promised bride. As the fairies lament, Iolanthe begins the song that will reveal her identity, and result in her death. The Queen raises her sword to kill Iolanthe but Leila says all the fairies have married Peers and must die as well. The Queen says she can’t slaughter the whole company, but the law is clear. The Lord Chancellor offers a suggestion. Insert a single word to read: Every fairy shall die who doesn’t marry a mortal. The Queen calls Private Willis up to save her life, which he obligingly does. All sing “Soon as we may, Off and away! Up in the sky, Ever so high, We’ll commence our journey airy – Happy are we – As you can see, Ev’ry one is now a fairy!” All fly off to Fairyland and President Libby thanks us all for participating.

David sings the Pirate King’s lead-in, Andy conducts as performers and audience join in singing our traditional “Hail, Poetry” (The Pirates of Penzance) and “Now to the banquet we press” (The Sorcerer). A very happy crowd rises to express approval, and surges off to enjoy the refreshments in the lobby.

The Source of The Sorcerer
by Ralph MacPhail, Jr.

Earlier columns have attempted to show Gilbert's indebtedness to Gilbert in writing his libretti, for one of the delights of studying Sir William is discovering his self-plagiarism (self-inspiration?). Even his early reviewers frequently noticed this, and Gilbert himself, late in life, expressed his “indebtedness to the author of the Bab Ballads . . . from whom I have unblushingly cribbed. I can only hope that, like Shakespeare, I may be held to have so far improved upon the original stories as to have justified the thefts that I committed.”

The Sorcerer is unique among the Gilbert & Sullivan collaborations in that it was inspired by a Gilbert short story, not by his light verse or one of his earlier dramatic works. (I added those “hises” for, of course, the use of “love potions” is centuries-old in stories, plays, and operas, some of which remain well-known today; Shakespeare’s A Midsummer Night’s Dream (1590-96?) and Donizetti’s An Elixir of Love (1832) are two of the most famous. (As noted in the last issue, Dulcamara was a burlesque by Gilbert of An Elixir of Love. And Donizetti’s opera, incidentally, was an Italian adaptation by Felice Romani of Frenchman Eugène Scribe’s libretto, Le philëre, set to music in 1831 by Daniel Auber.)

But in 1877, when Gilbert was casting about for an idea for his first full-length collaboration with Arthur Sullivan to be produced by Richard D’Oyly Carte, he went to his own short story, “An Elixir of Love,” which had been published in the Christmas issue of The Graphic the year before. It’s worth your attention, and you can read it here: https://archive.org/details/foggertysfairyot00gilb (note: the 00 before “gilb” are zeroes; the o before the “t” is an oh. The story runs on pages 43-68 in Gilbert’s collection, Foggerty’s Fairy and Other Tales).

Gilbert’s method of writing his libretti centered on developing his plots in short-story form, then revising, revising, and (after consultation with Sullivan as to musical situations) revising some more. While “An Elixir of Love” is very similar to The Sorcerer, many adjustments were made to convert it to a libretto. In it you will find that the romantic couple in The Sorcerer (Alexis Poindextre and Aline Sangazure) have different names (The Rev. Stanley Gay and Jessie Lightly). J. W. Wells & Co., Family Sorcerers, located in St. Mary Axe in London are “Baylis & Culpepper, magicians, astrologers, and professors of the Black Art” located in St. Martin’s Lane. And while romantic mix-ups are similar in both works, the Rev. Mr. Gay loses his love to his bishop, and his love’s father, Sir Caractacus Lightly, baronet, ends up marrying the Rev. Gay’s cook and housekeeper, Zorah.

It’s a delightful read. If you’d like to compare it with The Sorcerer, and don’t have a copy of the Savoy Operas in your nightstand (which you should), surf over to: http://diamond.boisestate.edu/gas/sorcerer/sorcerer_lib.pdf.

At the risk of repeating myself, I’ll conclude by saying that to really appreciate the Gilbert of Gilbert & Sullivan, it’s necessary to become acquainted with his earlier works. It will be a delightful experience and will increase your appreciation for his libretti.
Michael Meigs Receives Recognition at the B. Iden Payne Awards Ceremony

The B. Iden Payne Awards Ceremony was held on November 3. While none of our nominees for H.M.S. Pinafore came home with a coveted BIPPY award, GSSA Board Member Michael Meigs received a Certificate of Special Recognition “awarded to Michael Meigs of Central Texas Live Theatre for reporting on the arts and fostering a regional perspective.” Congratulations, Michael, on this well-deserved honor!

Wand’ring Minstrels

The Wand’ring Minstrels performed at the St. Mark United Methodist Church’s “St. Market Day Festival.” They received a glowing thank-you from St. Mark’s Jenny Smith:

“Dear Bob, Thanks so much to you, Janette, and all of the Wand’ring Minstrels who performed at our Fall Festival on October 25, 2014. We had a wonderful time! We received enthusiastic compliments from both members of and visitors to St. Mark UMC. Several of our members want to hire the Wand’ring Minstrels just for a fun afternoon event because they enjoyed themselves so much.

“The mix of more recent (Disney, etc.) musical numbers and the original Gilbert & Sullivan pieces was a good way to get both young and old audience members interested and involved. My four year old daughter kept insisting that she wanted to stay for ‘one more song’ until the show was over. I think both the youngsters as the ‘chorus’ and the rest of us in the audience really liked the use of props to help us sing along. The inherent humor in Gilbert & Sullivan’s writing is matched by the light and silly tone that you, the performers, take to keep the show fun and moving. The Beast mask was definitely my favorite prop. Thank you for including me and the audience in the show. It is harder to include others, but I think it was worth it.”
